Objective
Critique classmates’ site design documents.

Activity
- Review the design documentation provided.
- Write up your findings informally, attending to the following points:
  - Do the scenarios cover all of the important ground for the implementation of the system?
  - Does the content inventory and functional description cover everything needed to implement the scenarios?
  - Does the site diagram include all of the necessary pieces? Is the arrangement of information logical and supportive of efficient interaction?
- Prepare a constructive critique, incorporating the comments of all team members.

Submission
Turn in both the individual findings and the final document.

Notes
- Different teams will have different conceptions of how the tutoring exchange should work. The object of the critique is not to force all of the teams to build the same site. You should accept the assumptions behind the site even if they differ from the assumptions that your team is making.
- Be constructive in your critique. If you think a scenario is missing, sketch out what you think that scenario should contain.
